The Environmental and Energy Study Institute (EESI) invites you to a briefing on corporate climate risk, resilience, and disclosures. The climate crisis is increasingly impacting companies of all sizes by threatening valuable assets, operations, and supply chains. At the same time, many companies contribute to the climate crisis by emitting greenhouse gases, and efforts to curb those emissions could impact companies. In March 2022, the Securities and Exchange Commission proposed a rule that, if adopted, would require publicly-traded companies to disclose climate-related risks and report their greenhouse gas emissions.

Panelists will explain what Congress needs to know about climate-related financial risks, steps that can be taken to build a climate resilient financial system, and the benefits and impacts that the proposed rule would have on federal agencies, companies, and shareholders.

Speakers for this forum are:

- Madison Condon, Associate Professor of Law, Boston University
- Emily Wasley, Practice Leader of Corporate Climate Risk, Adaptation, and Resilience, WSP
- Jane Thostrup Jagd, Deputy Director of Net Zero Finance, We Mean Business Coalition
- Ryan McQueeney, Sustainable Investment Stewardship Analyst, Wespath Benefits and Investments

This event is free and open to the public.
