Becca Trietch serves as an Energy Efficiency Administrator at the Rhode Island Office of Energy Resources (OER), where she helps develop and oversee policies and programs that improve energy efficiency throughout the state. OER works closely with private and public stakeholders to increase the reliability and security of Rhode Island's energy system; reduce long-term energy costs; and promote adoption of clean, no-to-low carbon energy solutions, while balancing ratepayer and environmental impacts. Becca helps to oversee utility-administered energy efficiency programs and supports policy work related to building codes, renewable heating, and building energy broadly. She also serves at the Chair of the Green Buildings Advisory Committee.

Becca has a Masters in Environmental Science and Management from the University of Rhode Island. She also holds a Bachelor's degree in Mechanical Engineering from Yale University and is working on a Doctorate in Law & Policy at Northeastern University.
